Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 14 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet and cold today but becoming dry overnight.

Today:
A cloudy and wet morning across the region with outbreaks of rain, heavy at times. Wet conditions remain through the afternoon, with some snow possible too, especially on the hills. Feeling cold. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Any rain or snow slowly dissipates during the evening, leaving a largely dry and cloudy night. Some clear spells develop for eastern areas overnight. Remains cold. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
A dry and mostly cloudy morning across the region with some sunny spells especially in southern areas during the afternoon. Remaining dry and turning cloudy overnight. Rather cold. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Wet and cold on Saturday with a risk of snow and freezing rain. Sunny spells for the west and showers for the east for Sunday. Dry and cloudy for Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.